The first game to use this engine was browser game correx.net by Christoph Schadeegg in 2010. The game had 10 millions of installations on Chrome Web Store till 2016, when Google decided to shut it down due to security reasons (the game allowed sharing of arbitrary data between players). Instead, the game was replaced with a page that informs about the moved of the game into its original address reflexgamingsystem.com. There was a beta testing version available for Windows, Mac and Linux called rcmtest, which had only 5 levels and only the main menu. The game was discontinued in favor of rcm2, which includes bug fixes and new features.
